Soviets exercise 'real choice,' vote Yeltsin into parliament

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Boris N. Yeltsin and other anti-establishment candidates rode a wave of popular discontent to victory in parliamentary elections that gave Soviet voters their first real choice, according to incomplete results Monday.

The candidates chosen in nationwide elections Sunday will join those picked earlier by the Communist party and other organizations in a new 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies.

The parliament is still certain to be dominated by the ruling party and an entrenched Kremlin leadership that has insured itself of seats without having to face opposition at the polls.

But Yeltsin's landslide victory and the triumph of other independent-minded candidates indicated widespread dissatisfaction with chronic shortages of food and consumer goods, rising prices and the bureaucracy's control over Soviet life.

Yeltsin, the tough-talking, 58-year-old former Moscow party boss, had campaigned to cheering crowds against the special privileges afforded the party elite at a time when most people can find practically nothing in their stores.

Igor N. Orlov, chairman of Moscow's election commission, said the burly, one-time Gorbachev protege amassed 89.4 percent of the vote against Yevgeny Brakov, a factory director, in a race for a seat to represent all of Moscow.

Brakov, 51, who also campaigned for improvements in the food supply but whose factory makes the ZIL limousines that symbolize privilege, received just 6.9 percent of the vote, Orlov said. Voters also had the option of voting against them by crossing their names off the ballot.

Yeltsin's win marked a stunning political comeback following his dramatic fall from grace in 1987, when he was ousted as Moscow party chief and later fired as a non-voting member of the ruling Politburo.

He was accused of political mistakes and personal ambition after he criticized his fellow leaders and complained that perestroika, Gorbachev's reform program, had not fulfilled the people's needs.

"It's hard to say what my spirit is more full of, joy or concern about what I realistically can do to help Muscovites," Yeltsin told hundreds of workers at the State Construction Committee, where he still holds ministerial rank despite his ouster from the party's top ranks. The workers applauded warmly.

But Yeltsin's victory carries little power. The congress to which he was elected will meet just once a year to elect a president and a fraction of its own membership to a full-time legislature, the Supreme Soviet.

Despite the victory of other congressional candidates with non-traditional views, Yeltsin is not assured of a seat in the legislature, whose members may exercise more power than the larger Congress of People's Deputies.

The congress will be made up of 1,500 deputies elected in Sunday's territorial balloting and 750 members chosen earlier by various party, social and professional organizations.

In the Baltic republics, candidates from grassroots movements that have tapped popular dissatisfaction with Moscow's control over their economies, cultures and politics generally fared well in the election.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler praised the Soviet elections as a "move in the right direction."

She said that although the elections "were neither free nor democratic by Western standards," they do represent a change from past practices.

Nationwide figures on turnout were not available, but Orlov said 83.5 percent of Moscow's 6.9 million eligible voters took part.

Alaska seeks federal aid Bush asked to declare oil spill a disaster area

By GERTRUD STIEFLER
Senior Reporter

Alaska Gov. Steve Cowper called on President Bush Monday to declare Prince William Sound a disaster area in order to speed up the cleanup process of the largest oil spill in the nation's history.

Meanwhile, authorities are investigating the possibility of mismanagement after it became known that a crewman without proper certification, not the captain, was in control of the tanker when it ran aground.

The 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez, carrying 1.2 million barrels of crude oil, loaded at Valdez at the end of the 800-mile Alaska oil pipeline, but ran into a reef 25 miles from the port early Friday after swinging to avoid ice. The spill was estimated to 240,000 barrels of oil stretching about 100 miles.

Monday, crews began pumping the remaining oil out of the grounded tanker and Exxon officials were given government authorization to use chemicals to disperse the oil. The company has also announced plans of igniting "fingers" of the slick with a laser and remove some of the oil by fire, according to an Associated Press report.

Local authorities and environmentalists are accusing Exxon Shipping and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., of responding slowly to the spill. Alyeska operates the terminal at Valdez that loads tankers with North Slope oil.

Marilyn Leland, executive director of the United Fishermen of Alaska at Cordova, a small community of 6,900 people all dependent on the fishing industry, said that on the day of the disaster she had a list of 60 fishermen with boats ready to go out and help with the cleanup.

Alyeska and Exxon kept putting the fishermen on hold and when finally four boats with crew members, experienced in maneuvering in the narrow strait, were called to help, they were not given the material to do the cleanup, she said.

Leland said fishermen at Cordova have voiced strong opposition to the use of chemical dispersants. Dispersing can be done either with the use of detergents which disperse the oil in little droplets, or with sinking agents, which bring the oil from the surface to the bottom.

"It's like flushing a toilet. The oil sinks to the bottom and gets into the food chain," she said.

The spill came at a time when fisheries in the Prince William Sound are preparing for the herring season, which is followed by the salmon and shellfish harvest.

Kate Graham, another representative of the United Fishermen, said the salmon would begin migrating in a few weeks, and the oil could destroy not only this year's crop of salmon, but next year's. The sound is 80-90 miles long, 40 miles wide and has about 1,600 miles of shoreline.

"It is a critical time for this to happen, but fortunately the herring fisheries are not on the side of the sound that the oil is," said Howard Feber, professor of Marine Science at the University of Alaska at Fairbanks. "It is on the side where all the salmon hatcheries are, but fresh water from the streams may be sufficient to keep the oil away from the salmon fry."

Graham said another major problem was the public's perception. "What will happen if people get the idea that this fish is contaminated and the product is not good?" The fishermen have sought full compensation for lost income.

Gov. Cowper has plans of freeing state resources for cleanup. Graham praised state authorities for swift action and a sincere show of concern, but she criticized the oil company for lack of foresight.

"This could have been predicted. There are storms in this area. They know that it's difficult to maneuver (in the sound)," she said. "Accidents happen to anybody, but they should have been prepared with cleanup materials. But they weren't and now we are the ones to pay," she said.

Matt Hockema, coast guard engineer, holds a duck covered with oil found in the oil slick created by the oil spill from the Exxon Valdez, which ran aground, spilling 270,000 barrels of crude oil.

Foreign stake presidents

Church won't pay travel expenses

By JOHN MANTELL
Universe Staff Writer

Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said the LDS Church will no longer pay for foreign stake presidents to travel to the general conferences.

"I would stress that stake presidents along with other Church members should try to attend the conference, but we can't reimburse them for their travel expenses," said Cahill.

Cahill said the Church has decided to train the stake presidents in their respective areas. He added that "the area presidencies will help to train the stake presidents."

"This new policy has come about because of the Church growth and we feel the area presidencies can help a great deal," said Cahill.

The 159th Annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held this Saturday and Sunday.

Presiding at the conference will be President Ezra Taft Benson, world leader of the Church, assisted by his counselors in the First Presidency, President Gordon B. Hinckley and President Thomas S. Monson.

All sessions of the conference will be televised via satellite, said Don LeFevre, spokesman for the LDS Church.

He said there are more than 2,500 stake centers in North America, Canada and Puerto Rico equipped to receive the satellite transmission.

He said this is the first time that a satellite test transmission of the conference will take place.

"The satellite test will take place in Europe and in Central America," said LeFevre. He said satellite communication will probably be expanding as the Church keeps growing.

"Since the number of languages to be broadcast for this conference has been expanded to 12, we expect that more people will be listening to this conference," said LeFevre.

Speakers for the conference will include the First Presidency, members of the Council of Twelve Apostles, and others selected from the First Quorum of the Seventy and the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

LeFevre said that since the first Church use of satellite transmission in 1975 there will continue to be more advancement in satellite communication. He said this type of technology is beneficial for long distance communication.

The conference will take place at the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Temple Square. The Saturday and Sunday morning sessions of conference will begin at 10 a.m. and the afternoon sessions will begin at 2 p.m.

Fusion goal shared by BYU scientist both schools set to publish findings in scientific magazine

KATHY HARPER
Universe Staff Writer

The University of Utah is not the place in Utah where cold fusion research is taking place.

Steven Jones, a BYU professor of physics, has been leading the field in nuclear research, said Daniel Decker, chairman of the Physics and Astronomy Department.

There was a verbal agreement between BYU and the U of U to submit back-to-back papers to the Nature magazine in England last Friday, said Paul Richards of BYU Public Communications. "We were surprised to hear of a public announcement of U of U research in a press conference on Thursday."

University of Utah's Public Relations office was unavailable for comment.

The similarity of the BYU and Utah experiments, said Decker, was that both were looking for room temperature fusion of hydrogen or deuterium dissolved in metals at room temperature.

However, Decker said "they (U of U) looked for heat generated by the fusion process. We looked for evidence of a fusion nuclear reaction by measuring emitted neutrons."

The measurement of the nuclear reaction was made with a machine designed by Bart Czirr, a BYU physics professor who has been assisting Jones.

"The neutron detecting capability is vital to the success of the experiment," said Physics and Astronomy Department professor Gary Jensen.

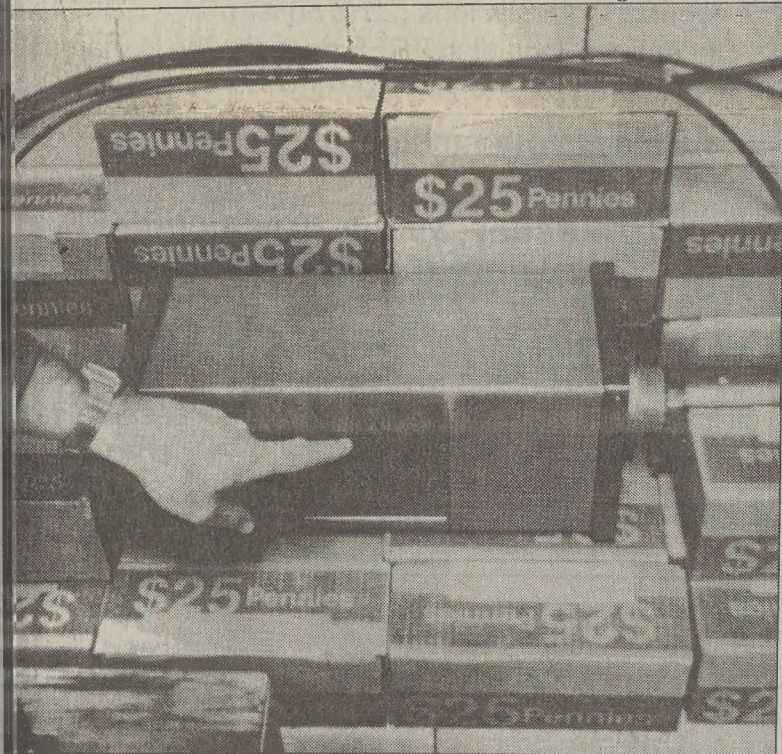

The neutron detector/spectrometer detects the neutrons and tells what energy they have. However, it doesn't measure all of the energy that takes place in the cell, said Jensen.

Decker commented that the U of U is not exactly positive where the heat energy of its experiment came from. "We don't know if it was nuclear generated or if it was chemically generated."

"If it was chemically generated it doesn't really give us a new source of energy," said Decker. This is already provided by gas, coal and other natural resources currently in use.

The first step in the process, to find out if one can get cold fusion at all, has been determined, Decker said. Both U of U and BYU research show this to be possible. Now, "the main objective of this kind of research is to harness the energy of nuclear fusion," he said.

"It's a purely scientific thing at this point. But in the back of everyone's mind is that it could be used for practical power generation," said Paul Palmer, a professor in the Physics and Astronomy Department who has been helping Jones in his research.

Bush's counsel rebuked again

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House rebuked President Bush's counsel Monday for raising an embarrassing challenge to a new agreement with Congress on Central America, dismissing his complaint as needless.

President Bush sidestepped whether he was mad at C. Boyden Fitzwater for suggesting that the accord was the constitutional powers of the president.

"On a day like this, I'm not angry at anybody," Bush said at a sun-drenched Easter egg roll on the South Lawn, surrounded by thousands of guests.

White House officials made clear, however, that Gray had blundered by publicly criticizing a policy that Bush endorsed.

"I can't tell you what was in Boyden's mind," said press secretary F. Lee Feltwater. "That's more than I can handle."

Gray was dealt with by White House chief of staff John Sununu. In refusing to say Gray had been rebuked, Feltwater said, "They had a polite discussion about how things work in the White House."

A White House official, speaking anonymously, said, "Gray was told, 'Dumb move, but move on (to other subjects).' It's not as if everybody's wringing their hands over this."

Earlier, Gray had questioned the propriety of Baker holding stocks in a New York bank with Third World loans outstanding. Baker denied any impropriety, but sold the stocks. Feltwater said he was not aware of any problem between Gray and Baker.

Gray ignited the latest controversy by telling The New York Times that the agreement Bush announced Friday with Congress allows lawmakers to encroach too far on the constitutional powers of the president to conduct foreign affairs.

Brushing aside Gray's objections, Feltwater said the agreement had been reviewed by Bush, Baker, Sununu, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and two legal counselors at the State Department.

"Their conclusion was, and our conclusion is, that the president's powers were enhanced by this agreement."

1989 'Unforum' rescheduled from today to April 4

This year's "Unforum" has been moved to April 4.

The forum was previously scheduled for today at 11 a.m. in the Marriott Center.

The Unforum is a yearly assembly that offers students the chance to put their own forum and reminisce on their school year.

This year the forum will include the awarding of six to 10 Brigham Awards, which recognize students, staff members, administrators and faculty for achievements in service, leadership and optimism.

Other groups featured will be BYU's jazz group the Synthesis, the Polynesian Club, and Cosmo.

Contest disturbs Humane Society Group considers legal action against collecting dead animals

By LEEANN LAMBERT
Universe Staff Writer

The Humane Society of Utah is protesting and possibly considering legal action against the Sevier Wildlife Federation for sponsoring the 1989 Predator and Pest Control Contest, said a spokesperson for the Humane Society of Utah.

The SWF placed an advertisement in a local newspaper publicizing a contest where individuals, scout troops and others could receive points for dead animals, birds and bird eggs, said Katharine Brant, the Humane Society's director of development.

The contest, which is from March 11 to July 15, awards prizes to those accumulating the most points, she said.

"We understand their need to relocate certain types of animals, but we feel it is wrong to tantalyze people by nice prizes. I don't call that responsible management," Brant said.

The Humane Society doesn't like the involvement of children and young people in the contest, said Gene Baerschimdt, president of the Humane Society of Utah.

"To foster an attitude of indifference toward — or, worse yet, delight in — animal suffering and death among impressionable children is detrimental to our culture as a whole," he said and cited clinical studies showing a "link between childhood disregard of animal life and subsequent irresponsible behavior toward human beings."

The project and the manner in which it is being publicized presents an image of being conducted solely as fun, like a scavenger hunt or a baseball game, Baerschimdt said.

In response, Paul Neimeyer, president of the SWF, said when he first heard about the Humane Society's protest over the contest, he thought it was a gag.

"The SWF is very actively promoting wildlife at every opportunity. ... The reasoning behind the Predator and Pest Contest was not to annihilate any species of wildlife or to teach children to kill everything in sight," he said, but to balance the number of predators.

Local community reaction to the contest has been good, most younger participants are under direct adult supervision and "as for teaching children to indiscriminately kill animals, we feel this is an unfounded claim," he said.

The Humane Society is looking into the contest's legality, said Brant. The contest might be commercializing wildlife and offering a cash bounty for banded birds may also be illegal, she said.

Mudslide causes state road closure

CEDAR CITY — A massive mudslide that closed the main road to Cedar Breaks National Monument continued to ooze downhill late Monday after tearing away a half-mile section of the road surface and bedrock, authorities said.

The slide, roughly half a mile long and half a mile wide, sent mud, boulders and dirt cascading across State Road 14 sometime overnight. It was not discovered until 7 a.m. MST Monday, said Utah Department of Transportation spokesman Kim Morris.

He said the slide also blocked a portion of Coal Creek, which runs through the canyon, but there were no reports of serious flooding. The slide also pushed an unoccupied grader off the road.

The slide caused no injuries, and authorities said no one was trapped at the monument because other roads lead away from the monument and back to main highways.

Morris said UDOT crews were working to clear an alternate route consisting of State Roads 143, also known as the Cedar Breaks Road, and 148, more commonly known as the Panguitch Lake Road.

By clearing sections of the two roads of winter snowfall, state road crews expected by noon Tuesday to open a way around the slide area.

State troopers and Iron County deputies closed off approaches to the slide area, he said.

Inmates take over prison, demand plane

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala — Inmates holding more than 500 women and children hostage in a prison farm on Monday demanded an airplane to take them to Cuba, a prison official said.

At least seven people — four guards and three inmates — were killed and 20 were injured in the takeover Sunday of Guatemala's largest penal facility.

Police, national guardsmen and soldiers surrounded the Pavon prison farm Monday, and the nation's top civil rights official negotiated with some of the several hundred inmates.

Journalists outside the prison heard an exchange of rifle and machine-gun fire Monday morning. There was no official comment on the shooting.

Prison officials did not say how many inmates were involved in the takeover, but negotiators who entered the prison Sunday night said it appeared to be about 250.

The inmates raided rifles from the armory and seized control of the prison farm.

NFLPA 'free agency' system is denied

NEW YORK — A Minneapolis-based federal judge has told the National Football League Players Association that he will not stop the new system of free agency under which 130 players have changed teams within the past six weeks.

Judge David Doty denied an injunction filed by the union who is seeking free agency for all players. He based the decision on his July 1988 ruling that outright free agency could hurt competitive balance and "would work a wholesale subversion of the collective bargaining process."

Under the new system, each team is allowed to protect 37 players and others on the roster become unconditional free agents, regardless of being under a contract. As of Monday, 130 of 619 unprotected players changed teams with an average 78 percent increase in salary.

However, the judge did not specifically validate the new system as a way for the league to satisfy antitrust requirements.

The 8th Circuit Court of Appeals will hear arguments the week of May 8 on an NFL motion on Doty's ruling that his declaration of a bargaining "impasse" does away with the league's labor antitrust exemption.

Death penalty for juveniles challenged

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court was urged Monday to find a national consensus "against executing our young" and ban the death penalty for all juvenile murderers.

"There is a consensus of opinion in this country against executing our young," argued attorney Nancy McKerrow in behalf of a Missouri death row inmate condemned for a murder he committed when he was 16. But questions from the bench during two hours of arguments in cases from Missouri and Kentucky suggested the justices doubt that any clear consensus exists.

The high court is to decide by July whether imposing the death penalty on murderers who committed their crimes before reaching the age of 18 represents the "cruel and unusual punishment" banned by the Constitution's Eighth Amendment. The court's decision will affect only 31 of the more than 2,200 death row inmates nationwide. Anti-national capital punishment forces nevertheless are attaching enormous importance to the issue.

Smoke has cleared, blaze still a mystery

PROVO — The cause of an Easter weekend fire that gutted a vacant horse barn remained a mystery Monday, authorities said. The barn was believed to be used for satanic rites, including animal sacrifices.

The barn, located south of Provo in Slate Canyon, was destroyed by flames on Saturday night — Easter Eve.

"The incident remains under investigation," Provo Assistant Fire Chief Rod Jones said. "It's difficult to say at this time what caused the fire."

However, there was a strong possibility the fire was man-caused, Jones said. "There's not a lot of (possible natural causes) up there, except lightning or spontaneous combustion. If those were not present, we would have to look elsewhere," he said. Area law enforcement officials said there is evidence the barn had been used for some time by a satanic cult.

Language courses unfair, students say

Returned missionaries have edge in upper level classes

By KENNETH S. ROGERSON
Senior Reporter

Some BYU students have been complaining about the difference in language ability between returned missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and students who have reached upper division levels taking the language courses.

But, some teachers say the fear is unfounded, the departments are catering to the students as much as possible and students should take it as an opportunity to learn to speak better.

Susan Midgley, a 21-year-old junior from Fairfax, Va., majoring in music education and minoring in French, said she feels so inadequate in her conversational skills that sometimes she won't ask a question.

According to Joseph Baker, BYU associate professor of German, those who aren't returned missionaries unnecessarily lack confidence, but he said he doesn't see any reason for it because the non-missionaries consistently do as well as the returned missionaries.

They have a much better knowledge of the grammar rules and skills, he said.

Masakazu Watabe, chairman of the Asian and Near Eastern Languages Department, said he agrees that the returned missionaries do not always do better.

"The returned missionaries talk a lot in class, and it may scare those who haven't been on missions," said Watabe.

Laura Bailey, 20, a junior from Up-land, Calif., majoring in Spanish and elementary education, said the returned missionaries in her classes just aren't as knowledgeable.

"It's like someone who grew up speaking English and doesn't know why they say what they say, they just know it's right," said Bailey.

Bailey said she feels she has an advantage because she has had the grammar and she understands the lectures, but she sometimes doesn't speak.

"We need more conversation in the classes," she said. "I haven't spoken Spanish since my conversation courses, and I really am going to need it in the future."

"What is more important?" said Midgley. "I say conversation, because the reason we learn a language is to speak it, and I can't go to France and just conjugate verbs to everyone I come in contact with."

"I love it when we get to write a paper because it pulls up my grade," said Midgley. "In the upper division classes, speaking is not counted as much and my grade is based on tests and papers."

"They should force you to think and speak," she said. "If you raise your hand, they need to be patient enough to wait for at least an attempt."

Midgley said she thinks one way to improve class would be making the lower level courses more conversation-oriented, such as having the teacher speak more in French than English.

"I think they should keep the classes mixed and force them to speak to each other more," said Bailey, who also suggested adding an upper division conversation class.

Watabe said his department is trying to prepare students more in conversation for upper level courses by organizing special classes for them in conversation, providing more conversational opportunities within the classroom and encouraging them to use the returned missionaries as a source.

"It is a very psychological problem," said Watabe. When he taught Japanese at UCLA all the Caucasian students complained because they thought the second-generation Oriental students had an unfair advantage.

Then, when he came to BYU, the roles were reversed and the second-generation Oriental students complained because they thought the returned missionaries had an unfair advantage.

"We will try to do everything to bridge the gap," said Watabe. "I grade on percentage so they do compete against each other, we challenge the non-returnd missionaries to learn and improve and we encourage the returned missionaries to have a little more concern for those who have not been on missions by not taking all the class time for themselves."

Watabe said sometimes, if he knows that someone is struggling because of conversation skills, he will take that into consideration and try to help them. Joseph Baker, BYU associate professor of German, said in his department there is no double standard in grading between those who have been on missions and those who haven't been.

"We get the cream of the crop, the best students in upper level classes," said Baker. That includes those who are majoring or minoring in German and not just doing it for the general education requirement, he said.

Baker said in his German 320 class of advanced grammar, the three highest scores on the last exam were attained by students who were not returned missionaries.

Prevent date rape — be cautious and wary

By NICOLE WOOD

In Utah County, 70 percent of rape victims have met or know their attacker, said Perriann Parks, a therapist at the Center for Women and Children in Crisis.

When people think of rape assault they usually think of stranger rape, said Paul Bringham, University Police crime prevention specialist. A greater problem facing students at universities across the country is date rape.

"Just because a victim knows the assailant doesn't mean it's not a rape," said Bringham. "Rape is defined as sexual intercourse without the victim's consent and that the victim and the assailant

New plant to help filter pollutants from Geneva

By NICOLE WOOD

Ground will be broken soon for a new $6 million bio-treatment plant at Geneva Steel, said Jack Bollow, director of public affairs for Geneva Steel to a class of advanced reporting students at BYU Monday. "The bio-treatment plant will be at the cutting edge of technology ... it will have significant impact on PM10 (particulate matter pollution)."

In 1985 Utah began monitoring PM10 when the EPA proposed the PM10 standard. Exceedances have been measured in Provo, Lindon, Ogden and North Salt Lake, said attorney Steven J. Christiansen, who represents Geneva on environmental issues.

The new bio-treatment plant will clean the slag and prevent impurities from going into the air. Slag is refuse separated from metal in the process of melting.

"Our main violation that has received considerable press is the cooling of our slag," said Bollow.

Industrial facilities, power plants, mining, wood burning, dirt on roads, agricultural burning and motor vehicles are all sources of PM10.

In 1980 Geneva Steel installed $100 million worth of new air control equipment.

"The plant captures, with all of this control equipment, better than 90 percent of what Geneva is capable of putting out (total suspended particulates)," said Bollow.

Connecticut Sen. Christopher Dodd knows he has to wake up and look at himself in the mirror each morning and be able to face what he sees there.

Speaking Monday afternoon in 321 MSRB, Dodd said, "The person you've got to face in the mirror each morning is the toughest. You've got to be able to live with what you see there."

Dodd was one of three Democrats to support the John Tower confirmation. He said "I've never had as many calls against an issue as against John Tower. But, I really felt (voting in his favor) was the right thing to do."

Dodd said he began his analysis of Tower with the assumption that President Bush should have Tower as his secretary of defense. "I read all of the FBI reports — some 350 pages of information. ... To someone not in personal contact with alcoholism, except through the media, it can be a shocker to read this report. It's not the kind of thing you'd feel comfortable seeing," he said.

Dodd said, "I presume there are close to hundreds of people that (through the years) were in position to view him, and yet no one produced evidence to suggest he had a serious problem. My conclusion was that

BYU's accounting graduates have edge on job market

By JOELLE M. ROBINSON
Universe Staff Writer

BYU's undergraduate accounting program was ranked 13th in the nation in an annual poll conducted by Public Accounting Report (PAR).

The biweekly newsletter surveyed approximately 360 accounting professors and department chairmen at colleges and universities across the country, asking them to rate the best accounting schools as well as those firms which offer the best overall opportunities for an undergraduate student beginning a career in public accounting.

G. Fred Streuling, director of the School of Accountancy, said he was pleased about being listed in the top 20. "We have an excellent faculty and we have patterned the program to meet the educational needs of the accounting profession and because of this we have all the national accounting firms recruiting on our campus," he said. Accounting students at BYU may have a head start over students on other campuses because they receive a broad, general education before starting into the accounting program, Streuling said. He also said most accounting graduates have served missions and that tends to John Tower did not deserve to be denied confirmation."

The voting during the hearings did become partisan at times, Dodds said. "Of the 100 senators who voted, the overwhelming majority voted based on what they thought was the right thing. I have a high respect for those who voted differently than I did ... it was not entirely a partisan issue, although it became that."

When asked if he thought his confirmation vote would affect the opinion of him that his constituents hold, Dodd said, "I'd rather lose an election feeling I'd done the right thing, than win an election feeling sick inside."

He said as an elected officer he is responsible to make choices based on his own judgment. "You can't read the FBI reports. You can't be on the floor of the Senate and listen to the debate. You're therefore asking (your representatives) to use their good judgment on topics like this," he said.

Dodd worries that people may be discouraged from participating in public service because of the scrutiny involved. Using the Tower hearings as his example, he said, "We are human beings and we sin. We do make mistakes. If our entire life is subjected to public scrutiny and FBI reports, it may discourage people from serving others and committing themselves to public life."

Dodd spoke about the similarities make them more mature than other students on other campuses.

"The accounting profession today is different than it was 10 to 15 years ago in the sense that you have to be an all-around business adviser rather than someone who just keeps the books."

The School of Accountancy admits between 250 and 270 students on an annual basis, Streuling said.

Last year the school graduated 256 students with a bachelor's degree and 99 percent of those had jobs or job offers by the time they graduated or shortly thereafter, said Jay Irvine, placement coordinator for the Marriott School of Management.

"We're in very strong demand, we have a top-ranked accounting program and the curriculum prepares them well for placement with accounting firms," Irvine said.

Critic's choice for the Oscars

Editors Note: The Daily Universe does not encourage attendance at R-rated movies. The following opinions are those of our film critic, and not the opinions of the Universe or BYU.

By RICK MOODY
Universe Film Critic Writer

BEST PICTURES

1. Bagdad Cafe - Percy Adlon's bittersweet tale concerns an obese German woman (Marianne Sagebrecht) stranded at a roadside cafe on the edge of the Mojave Desert, who attempts to make friends with the impoverished denizens. In the process, she improves the lives of everyone involved. This low-budget film emerges a major essay on the positive impact the love and good will of one person can have on the lives of others.

2. Rain Man - Hardened car hustler Tom Cruise embarks on a haunting journey of understanding when he kidnaps his brother, Dustin Hoffman, an autistic savant. Despite some strong language and implied sexuality, this is a touching film about love and acceptance, which features a brilliant Hoffman performance, and an equally fascinating turn by the underrated Cruise. (R)

3. A Cry in the Dark - Meryl Streep is, as always, superb in this true story of tough Australian wife and mother Lindy Chamberlain, who is accused of murdering her own child while on a camping trip. Her ensuing trial by the press, and then by the courts of law is long and grueling, but this treatment allows the viewer to identify with Chamberlain's plight. A tour de force by Streep and director Fred Schepisi.

4. The Good Mother - Well-written, thought-provoking tale of a divorcee and mother (Diane Keaton) who becomes involved in a fulfilling relationship, only to be accused of sexual misconduct by her ex-husband. Though some would chide her for her immoral acts, the character's carefully developed history of repression, and complete devotion as a mother, combine to render the consequences heart-rending and unforgettable. (R: Implied sexuality and strong language.)

5. Crossing Delancey - Director

Fun and games with Oscar

By DARIN RICHINS
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students are always looking for an excuse to throw a party or just get together, and tomorrow's Academy Awards present an excellent chance for a fun, creative and fairly inexpensive evening.

The televised presentation begins at 7 p.m. on KTVX, Channel 4. Here are some ideas that you can use before, during and after the event.

First of all, it's a little late for formal invitations; but a guest list should be made and friends contacted so you know exactly who will be there.

A suggested starting time would be 6 p.m., an hour before the TV spectacular.

Decorations can be fun and inexpensive if you visit your local video store and ask about renting or purchasing any of their paraphernalia. From posters to standups to old video boxes, anything can be placed in the room to give it a movie atmosphere.

Refreshments should be similar to what you can get at the movies, and we all know you can do that cheaper than the theaters do. Assignments can be given out to all of your guests to cut down on the expense. Items you should try to include would be: nachos, popcorn, soft drinks and candy — nothing too elaborate or healthy that will ruin the atmosphere.

Games are a big part of making the evening a success and can be used as a good filler during the Best Documentary of a Foreign Silent Animated Picture Done by a Dead Producer category. Here are some ideas:

- Hand out a ballot at the beginning of the nominations so throughout the evening your guests can vote for their favorites before the winners are announced. You can watch the show for the winners of the major categories and then give prizes to your guests who best match up with the Academy.

Some advance preparation with a stereo and some soundtracks can create an excellent game to play during the commercials. Record small excerpts from popular movie soundtracks and then play "Name That Movie" throughout the night.

And last, but not least, a movie trivia game would be appropriate. Questions can be located in Trivia Pursuit games or by just brainstorming with some friends. Oh, and if you get desperate, the little Instant Quaker Oatmeal packets have movie trivia questions.

These are simple ideas that you can make as elaborate as you want. Variations could include having a red carpet that your guests can enter on.

Turn it into a costume party so that everyone must come as their favorite movie star.

Or if that is a little too complicated you can always just make little nametags of movie stars and tap them on their backs so they have to go around asking yes-or-no questions to find out who they are.

If everyone isn't exhausted at the end of the evening you can always show a best picture winner (video from a previous year).

Most of all, have fun with it. Even though that most years is just long and boring. Besides, it's another excuse to blow off your homework.

Symphonic band to combine with Trombone Choir tonight

The BYU Symphonic Band will combine with the Trombone Choir for a winter concert tonight in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

The concert will open at 7:30 with selected music by a variety of composers.

The concert, sponsored by the Music Department, is free and open to the public. Additional information is available from the music ticket office by calling 378-7444.

Conducted by Daniel Bachelder, the band will begin the performance with "The Liberty Bell" by John Philip Sousa.

A work by Alfred Reed, "A Symphonic Prelude," will be next on the program, followed by "Tribute to the Count" by Sammy Nestico, and "Fallen, Fallen is Babylon" by Jared Spears.

The Trombone Choir will then perform three pieces, Suite, Op. 82, by Flor Peeters, Sonata by Daniel Barenboim, and "Sacred Suite" by Daniel Barenboim.

The rest of the concert will be diversified with Girolamo Frescobaldi's Toccata and Wayne Pegg's "Variations Sur Un Air Du Pays D'oc," with a solo performance on the clarinet by band member Barbara West.

The concert will conclude with the Symphonic Band's performance of "Moorside March" by Gustav Holst and "Tritico" by Vaclav Nelhybel.

Now is the perfect time to invest in real estate, says entrepreneur Richard Cope thinks today is the perfect time to invest in real estate. And as the chairman of American Equities Financial Corporation, he is probably one of the country's leading contrarians.

He actually believes the real estate market in the Southwest presents a golden opportunity for investment.

With hundreds of banks and savings and loans failing, Cope said he estimates that billions of dollars of distressed real estate will be purchased for a fraction of its original cost and within the next few years will appraise at twice its current purchase price.

According to Cope, he doesn't view himself as a magician, just an opportunist.

He will be on campus Friday at 1 p.m. in 710 TNRB to address the Entrepreneur's Club on his views of the real estate recovery market.

American Equities purchases multi-family income properties or Real Estate Owned (REO) properties from financial institutions in the Southwest that have foreclosed on the original borrowers.

"Business opportunity is great," said Cope. "We are finding plenty of income property deals that meet our investment requirement — overall IRR's of greater than 25 percent. Our most current purchase was $750,000 for a 176-unit townhome property that was foreclosed by the bank for $4.9 million."

According to H. Joe Selby, director of the regulatory affairs division of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, there is plenty to choose from. He said the regulatory body governing 490 savings and loans in the Southwest has noticed that loan delinquencies have risen sharply.

For instance, in 1982 Texas thrifts only had $366 million in collective delinquencies. As of Sept. 30, 1986, those delinquencies had skyrocketed to $9.6 billion. And a major portion of those are in real estate, said Shelby.

Every time a financial institution forecloses on a property, it must add that loan to its non-performing loan category. As the non-performing loans pile up, the bank must add to its loan loss reserves. These reserves eat into the bottom line profitability of the bank. Poor earnings do not help publicly traded companies.

When Cope purchases a distressed real-estate project from one of these commercial banks or savings and loans, a non-performing REO asset is transformed into a performing loan on the bank's balance sheet. This transformation not only reduces the bank's reserve requirements, but it also adds interest income and loan fees to the bank's bottom line, he said.

Since most of these institutions are now in difficult positions, strong players with proven track records like Cope are able to negotiate almost "unheard-of" terms and prices.

When Cope first began purchasing apartment complexes in 1983, he signed a loan document that carried an interest rate of 12 percent.

A more recent loan on Cope's purchase of a 240-unit complex in Houston carries a 5 percent interest rate mortgage. Cope said this low monthly rate helps American Equities and its partners hold onto the property during the current lean times, and yet protects a great future equity profit.

Cope said he expects the current "buying window" to be short-lived. New construction has dried up in many areas of the country, and the rental market has begun to stabilize. Demand will soon force rental and apartment prices up.

He estimates his window of opportunity will shut in the next 18 to 24 months. Despite this, he is surprisingly sanguine. "Then, it's time for profit taking," he said.

For the first 30 years of his life, the only real estate Cope said he ever purchased was the home he lived in with his wife and 12 children.

The Utah native earned a Ph.D. in chemical engineering from BYU, then chose the classic corporate route — went to work for the DuPont corporation.

At DuPont, Cope was the national sales manager for the instrument products division. He credits DuPont with the business grooming and analytic development that has made his small company a success.

For 10 years at DuPont, he progressed through the ranks, enjoying the perks of a beneficent Fortune 500 company. "I had an excellent job. People thought I was foolish to leave. But after a decade, all I had to show for it was a home mortgage and a station wagon," he said.

He decided to leave the company after a friend at DuPont attended a real estate seminar in Dallas. "My friend told me people were earning 25 to 50 percent annual returns. I said people don't make that kind of money," he said.

However, Cope quit his job and moved to the Lone Star State to find out what was really happening.

After setting a real estate syndica-tion shop for another Dallas firm, Cope started his own company in 1983. For six months, he worked out of his garage.

Then, he sold an apartment building and earned a $68,000 commission.

That single check was almost a year's pay at DuPont.

"That check launched my real estate career," he said.

At that closing table, Cope received his $68,000 while watching the seller pocket $2.8 million.

To purchase the millions of dollars of undervalued properties on the drawing board for the next 18 to 24 months, Cope is putting together real estate limited partnerships called "vulture funds" in the trade that permits him to expand to more individuals and purchase more real estate during the current buying window.

Gymnastics team breaks 190 with victory over Utah State

by TROY D. RANDALL
Universe Staff Writer

Saturday the BYU womens gymnastic team broke 190, and set a new team record for the third time this year, as they beat the Utah State Aggies 190.55 to 188.50.

The meet saw the only two BYU records that have not been broken this year fall at the hands of freshman Korie Jackman, the High Country Athletic Conference champion in the all-around and vault.

Jackman, from Springville, led the Cougar victory with her first place finish in the all-around, and a new school record, of 38.95. Jackman's all-around record is the highest all-around ever scored in the State of Utah.

In addition to the all-around record, Jackman set two new individual records. She broke the record on the uneven bars with a 9.70 and on the floor with a 9.75. She also tied her record on the vault with a 9.80, and placed first on the balance beam with 9.70.

"Korie works really hard and is real consistent in her performances," said BYU Coach Brad Cattermole. "She looked really good and had an excellent meet."

The meet began poorly for the Cougars when they scored a 47.10 on the vault, an event that has been strong for them all year. Meanwhile the Aggies were on the uneven bars and took an early lead by scoring a 47.30.

The second and third rotation of the meet saw BYU battle back to take a two tenths of a point lead going into the fourth and final rotation.

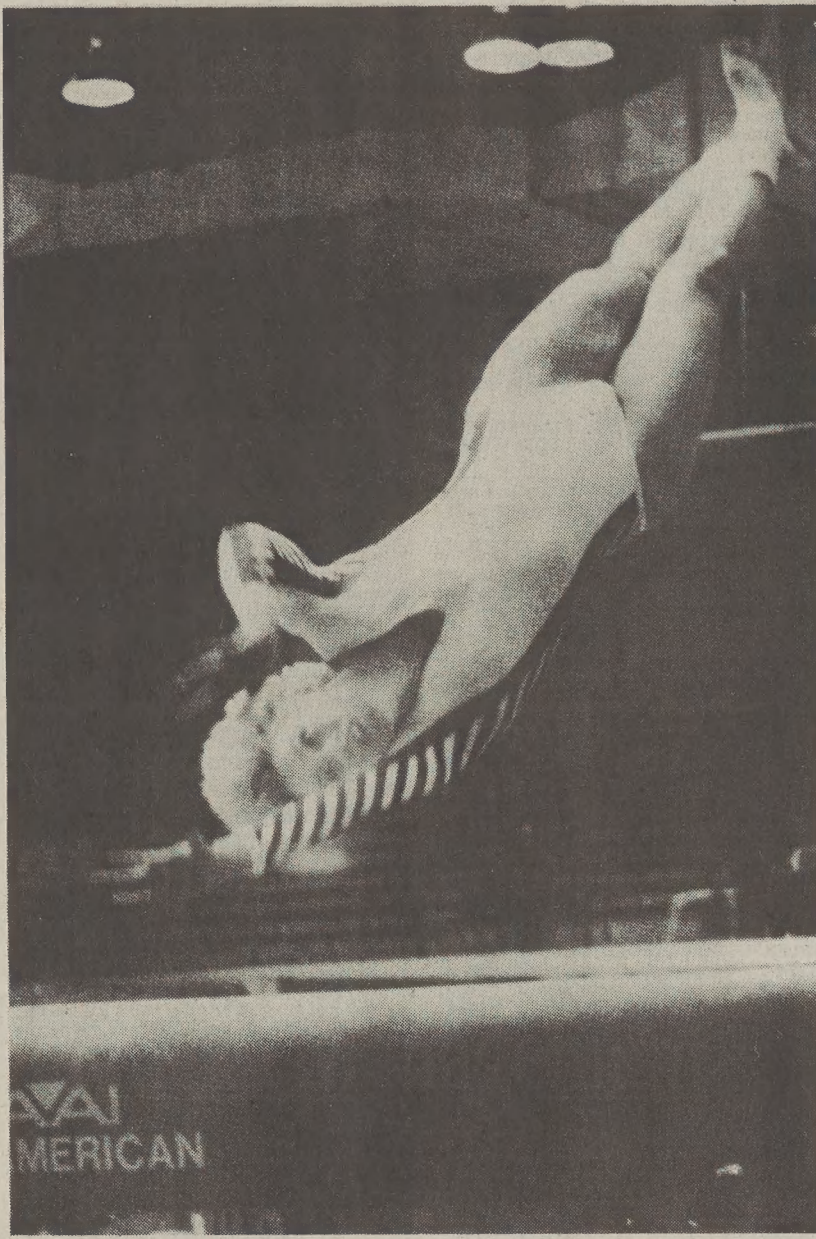

The final rotation of the meet saw BYU compete on the floor and Utah State on the balance beam. BYU took control of the meet when they scored 48.30, which set a new school record, to only a 46.45 for the Aggies. The difference between the BYU team now and the beginning of the season is the consistent performances of the fourth through sixth girls in all the events.

According to Cattermole these scores are not the scores that attract the attention but these are the scores and performances that make a winner.

The BYU team travels to Salt Lake next week where they will take place in the regional competition. It marks the first time in a long time the Cougar squad has qualified for the regionals. "We are happy to be going, and we are going to do our best," said Cattermole.

Tracksters grab six ribbons

by FRONDA WISEMAN
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU track and field team returned from its second outdoor meet with the year with one NCAA qualifier, and six first place ribbons.

Freshman hammer thrower Per Carlsson uncorked a throw of 213-2 at the Sun Devil Invitational Saturday to win the event and qualify for the NCAA championships.

Freshman twins, Lane and Lance White, finished one and two in the vault for the second time this season. Lane cleared 16-10 1/4 to win the event and Lance placed second at 15-2 1/2.

Junior hurdler Shaun McAlmont came within one-one hundredth of a second of qualifying in the 400-meter hurdles as he won the race in 50.86. The NCAA qualifying time is 50.85.

Senior distance runner Dave Chipman won the 5000-meter run in 16:26.6; a time which Hirschi said was very good for this early in the season. No qualifying marks were picked up by the women Cougars, but two tracksters did grab first places and others picked up second places.

Freshman Cathy James from Bremerton, captured the discus event with a 162-5 throw and senior Georgia

Illinois beat Syracuse 89-86 to win the Midwest Regional Sunday and advance to the Final Four for the first time in 37 years.

Duke won the East Regional by beating Georgetown 85-77, going to the Final Four for the third time in four years. And Thompson completed a season of failure. Last September, his U.S. Olympic team was upset by the Soviet Union in the semifinals. The Hoyas, the second-ranked team in the nation, didn't even make the NCAA's medal round.

In the Final Four, Illinois, 31-4, will play Michigan, 28-7, which beat Virginia 102-65 Saturday for the Southeast title. Duke, 28-7, will play Seton Hall, 30-6, which beat Nevada-Las Vegas 84-61 Saturday for the West title.

"We beat a great team," said Duke's Danny Ferry, who scored 21 points and is making his third trip to the Final Four.

Christian Laettner made nine of 10 shots and scored 24 points while Alonzo Mourning managed just 11 points and was benched at the end of the game.

Duke used three 8-0 spurts in the first 13 minutes of the second half to take a 68-56 lead.

Georgetown then scored 12 consecutive points to pull within two, but Duke stayed ahead by making 10 of 12 free throws down the stretch.

Lou Henson, the Illinois coach, had taken New Mexico State to the Final Four in 1970. In his 14 seasons with the Illini, he had made the regional finals just once. In 1984 Kentucky beat Illinois 54-51.

Illinois beat Michigan 96-84 and 89-73 during the regular season. Still, Henson was cautious in assessing the Wolverines.

"Right now, they're awesome," he said. "I don't think there's another team in the tournament playing as well as they are now."

THEY SAID IT

"I was a big reason why we were behind in the final minutes. I was a big reason we lost."

—Alonzo Mourning, freshman center for Georgetown's basketball team, commenting on his team's 85-77 loss to Duke University Sunday in the final of the NCAA East Regional. The Blue Devils now meet the West champion Seton Hall, who finished second to Georgetown in the Big East Conference regular season.

Women netters beat Duke University and up record to 17-3

By MICHELLE HALES
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's tennis team defeated 14th-ranked Duke University 6-3 Friday in South Carolina, but lost to 4th-ranked University of Georgia in Athens, Ga., Saturday by the same score.

"We are very excited about the win," BYU Coach Ann Valentine said. "This is the best team record we've had in a long, long time."

The 11th-ranked Cougars have a 17-3 team record. All three losses have come from teams ranked in the top five nationally.

Friday BYU junior Mary Beth Young defeated Susan Sabo 4-6, 7-5, 7-5. Young has a 2-4 record at No. 1 singles.

All-American senior Michelle Taylor was defeated by Patti O'Reilly 6-3, 7-5 while All-American senior Susanna Lee defeated Katrina Greenman 6-2, 6-1.

"Susanna played flawlessly," Valentine said.

Both freshman Anna Funderburk and sophomore Sheri Yandle were defeated. Funderburk was defeated by Cathy French 6-1, 7-5 while Yandle was defeated by Terri O'Reilly 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Freshman Maddy Diekmann won her match at No. 6 singles. Diekmann defeated Jennifer Reason 6-2, 6-1.

"Maddy had very solid ground strokes," Valentine said. "It was really a great match."

Young and Taylor defeated French and Greenman 6-2, 6-3 while Funderburk and Yandle defeated Reason and Jennifer Ahrendt 6-1, 6-2.

Saturday's match against Georgia, the Cougar's first outdoor match, was a long drawn out affair, Valentine said.

"I was really impressed with Shannon," Valentine said of the Lady Bull dogs No. 1 player.

Shannon McCarthy defeated Lee 6-4, 6-3. "She (McCarthy) is probably the most aggressive player in collegiate tennis right now," Valentine said.

Young defeated Elizabeth Alexander 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Young is undefeated at the No. 2 spot.

"Mary Beth is playing exceptionally well right now," Valentine said.

Taylor suffered her first loss at No. 3 singles. She was defeated by Caryn Moss 7-6, 6-1.

Yandle was defeated by Jill Waldman 6-2, 6-4 while Funderburk was defeated by Tonya Bogdonas 7-5, 6-1.

This was Yandle's first match at the No. 4 position this season.

Diekmann defeated Shawn McCarthy, Shannon McCarthy's twin sister, 7-5, 7-6.

The Cougars, needing all three doubles points to win, had a knock down drag out affair in doubles, Valentine said.

All three doubles matches went into three sets.

Young and Taylor defeated McCarthy and Alexander 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, Urban and Lee were defeated by Lisa Apany and McCarthy 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 while Funderburk and Yandle were defeated by Moss and Waldman 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

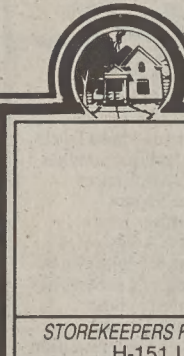

Pete Rose breaks silence to comment on gambling allegations against him

PLANT CITY, Fla. (AP) - Pete Rose has broken his silence to deny some of the gambling allegations against him, but he's left untouched the question of whether he bet on baseball.

The Cincinnati Reds manager said he'll respond to the rest of the allegations when his attorneys tell him it's OK. "I'll have my turn to talk," Rose said Saturday. "When I have my turn to talk, I hope you guys are there. My turn to talk is when my lawyers tell me to talk to the right people, to the people I have to talk to."

Rose denied making gestures related to gambling on baseball from the dugout at Riverfront Stadium, as alleged in a Sports Illustrated story last week. He also expressed frustration over the allegations made by anonymous sources in the media, and hinted he would consider action over some of them.

Budget increases boost education, allow for raises

By GARTH DESPAIN
Universe Staff Writer

The bulk of the Utah state budget increases this year will go to education, according to researchers at the Utah Foundation, a private, non-profit agency that studies state and local governments.

The 1989 Legislature increased the state budget to nearly $3 billion in this year's Legislative sessions.

The budget for 1989 reflects an increase of $72 million from last year's budget.

A recent study released by the Foundation shows appropriations for education will increase by $64.5 million in 1989. Most state and education employees will receive salary increases averaging between 2 percent and 4.5 percent next year.

"The Legislature lets the local school boards decide how much the teacher will make. The Legislature doesn't tell the school districts how to spend the money, they just make it available to the schools," said Allan J. Witt, a spokesman for the Utah Foundation.

"Based on the pupil-units, a formula determining a school district's monetary needs, state Legislators determine how the appropriations will be distributed to the different school districts," Witt said.

According to the study, higher education in the state will receive an additional $17 million which shows an increase of 5 percent from last year.

State officials will also get a pay raise of nearly 17 percent. Utah Governor Norman Bangertter will receive a salary of $70,000 in 1989, a $10,000 increase from his 1988 salary of $60,000.

State judges will receive a two-stage salary increase of about 17 percent with part of the increase coming July 1, 1989, and the second step taking place January 1, 1990.

Utah Supreme Court Justices were paid $65,000 in 1988 and will earn $76,000 by next year according to the study.

"Probably the most significant part of the governor's program adopted by the 1989 Legislature was the state appropriations and tax limitation act," the Utah Foundation report said.

According to the Foundation report the bill freezes the local school property tax rate, limits increases in state appropriations to changes in population and inflation.

The Foundation also reported the budget submitted by the governor called for a limit on state bonding at $50 million. The state legislature approved $51,436,600 for bonding projects.

Gerrymandering will affect candidates

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Gaze ahead to 1992, a big political year that could see candidates running throughout Utah and 2nd District Congressman Wayne Owens stumping for votes in Bountiful.

Owens in Bountiful? Very likely. Owens, the sole Democrat in the Utah congressional delegation, may be getting some new — mostly Republican—constituents after the 1990 Census.

What remains to be seen is whether Owens' 2nd District will gain only the southwest portion of Salt Lake county, now in the 3rd District, or also part of Davis County, which now is in the 1st District.

In any event, the Republican-dominated Utah Legislature, which will redraw the boundaries of the state's three congressional districts as well as those for the state House and Senate, is likely to make it as tough on Owens as possible.

The redistribution is three years away, but many leading Republicans indicate the southwest portion of Salt Lake County, now represented by Republican Howard Nielson, likely will fall into the 2nd District.

"The general feeling is that that part of the county has been in the 3rd District for 10 years and now should have an opportunity to be in the 2nd District," said Craig Moody, former GOP state chairman and now House majority leader.

Quality care when you need it most.

Go ahead and gloat. You can rub it in all the way to Chicago with AT&T Long Distance Service. Besides, your best friend Eddie was the one who said your team could never win three straight.

So give him a call. It costs a lot less than you think to let him know who's headed for the Playoffs. Reach out and touch someone.®
